3. Le Roch

I try being objective with all my reviews but I can't help gush a little about Le Roch. Their service was impeccable and the design, as subtle and reserved as it was, had something memorable about it.

This elegant 37-room boutique Hotel nestled between Palais Garnier, Louvre and Place Vendome is a great choice when it comes to selecting Parisian accommodation. Nearby, a wide selection of exclusive stores and the boutiques of leading designers, promise unforgettable shopping sprees. From Faubourg Saint-Honore to the Rue Cambon by way of the Rue Royale and, of course, the jewelers of the Place Vendome, you need only stroll for a few minutes to discover a multitude of tempting options.

Superstar interior designer Sarah Lavoine has managed to create a unique hotel design that creates a sense of spaciousness in a boutique setting.

Dark wood floors, roaring fireplace, gelato colored velvet Gubi chairs (these chairs are having a moment in Paris) under a light drenched circular skylight create a well-designed, moody, sexy perfect for day or night, lobby and dining area on the ground floor.

The restaurant is brought to life by rising star chef Arnaud Faye, who offers gourmet treats all day. Try something traditional such as Tartare de boeuf au couteau, or Epaule d'agneau confite (shoulder of lamb) with polenta croustillante, olives and roquette. Perfect for a business lunch during the week or lazy Sunday breakfast.

Weather permitting, you could sit in the hotels outdoor courtyard and soak in the sun whilst sipping on your morning latte or afternoon champagne.

Our room was spacious with a separate lounge area, bedroom and bathroom fit with double person hammam steam room and bath for your own spa experience.

Le Roche's 37 guestroom and suites feature unique decor, and are utterly charming with double windows, which open out to the courtyard below and little flower trays with blooming red flowers at the window sill.

Don't forget to check out the pool and fitness center on the lower level which is a treat in the winter after a long day shopping and indulging in everything Paris has to offer.

The real stand out apart from the interiors, restaurant and indoor pool, was the phenomenal service. Nothing seemed to much for these guys at the front desk. Want to get into to a members only club on a busy Friday night? No problem. Want to find a unqiue restaurant, event or store - the concierge team are young, cool and trust worthy. Put them to the test, and get ready to be pleasantly surprised.
